CANDI DASA

In the 1980s, Candi Dasa lost some of its sparkle when mining off the reef caused much of its white sandy beaches to wash away. These days, the beaches have returned, but not the crowds. Laid back in Bali's east, this seaside village is a picture of pretty tranquility. Surrounded by undulating low-rise mountains and white sandy beaches, a stunning lagoon is in its midst. Gentle turquoise waters lap its shore and the coastline offers sweeping views of the sea. The views at sunrise are spectacular too.

UBUD

The book, Eat, Pray, Love may have put it on the map, but lovers have been making the spiritual pilgrimage to Ubud for years. This spellbinding place of ancient temples and shrines, sacred rivers and coconut groves, deep in the mountains, is full of poetry and beauty. Intense green jungles of hanging banyan trees and palms abut sweeping rice paddies that descend the mountainside like steps. It's also Bali's cultural heartland: a creative hub of antiques, art, wooden carvings, beading and textiles. These days, there's a definite health aspect too, with organic cafes, yoga studios and alternative therapies on offer. Cooler than the coast thanks to its high elevation, with cloudy skies and misty rains common, things here move at a less-hectic, more-tranquil pace.
